

Just like spring

A false spring is budding in the Poconos as new leaves re-appear on trees once eaten by the hungry gypsy moth. Instead of naked branches, new greenery is covering the hillsides.

Mastering the Delaware

One man lets forth an entire river

MILFORD — The Delaware River has the distinction of being the only river in the country with a delegated river master at its helm.

Necessitated by New York City's demands on the river's water supplies, it is the river master who keeps the river going.

The day-to-day job of keeping the river waters at an acceptable level falls to Robert Fish, deputy river master in Milford. He monitors the only gauging station on the river at Milford Beach.

The present give and take system between the Delaware River and New York City was mandated by the Supreme Court in 1954.

It allows New York, via a reservoir chain, to draw up to 800 million gallons of water daily from the Delaware River Basin. In return, the city's reservoirs must release enough water to keep the river at a minimum level.

The Supreme Court also mandated the river master's job to keep the Delaware River flowing.

Fish, a deputy under River Master Joseph V. B. Wells in Washington, is responsible for predicting water levels in the river and ordering water from the reservoirs.

A complex, and rather nebulous, system of computations is used to determine water levels and orders from New York.

There are six measuring stations upriver from Milford which monitor the water levels in river tributaries. All report to Fish who must add up the amount of water that will find its way into the Delaware.

Fish must also take into account rain forecasted and the quantity of water, if any, the two power plants in the basin may release into the river.

Adding up water flow, though, is not like "adding up apples," Fish says. "It's a very inexact science."

The river master, in addition, must plan for water orders three days in advance.

It takes three days, Fish explained, for water from the furthest reservoir, the Pepacton in the Catskills, to reach the Milford gauging station.

The Milford gauging station must read 1750 cubic feet a second of water for New York to be fulfilling its part of the deal.

During the summer months, however, the Delaware is permitted an "excess release rate."

Although this is computed by a complicated formula, it means, simply, that the reservoirs must release additional water the river during the dry season.

Although the river master has no control over construction on the main river or its tributaries, he must take into account all water structures, such as dams.

Upper Delaware River residents complaints that flood control dams are hurting the Delaware's water level so that even a canoe can't float downstream unhampered, are unjustified, Fish said.

"One man said the river was dry up there," Fish argued. "If the river was dry, it would be a major catastrophe."

The closest the river ever came to dryness, Fish remembered, was in the drought of the early 1960's. It was the worst right here where the demand for water is so great," Fish said.

Susquehanna County President Judge Donald O'Malley called for the hearing on a request by Reilly's attorneys.

Neither O'Malley nor Wayne County District Attorney Robert Conway, who is prosecuting the case, would comment on the motion.

Reilly is scheduled to go to trial Oct. 23 — the beginning of the fall session of the Court of Common Pleas, Criminal Division, Wayne County.

He is charged with the death of Frank Dickerson, 23, Chester, a resident at the Hillcrest School in Hawley, an interim care facility for the mentally retarded.

The home was operated by Reilly until 1970 when he leased it to Commonwealth Concerns, Malverne. It has since been closed by the Department of Public Welfare.

Dickerson died at the Wayne Memorial Hospital in Honesdale March 24, 1970. His death was listed as "acute pneumonia" according to Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings.

Squatters file briefs in continuing battle

WILKES-BARRE — The Tocks Island squatters Tuesday submitted a new set of legal briefs in federal district court here as the latest step in their nine-month battle against a U. S. government eviction suit.

In compliance with a July 23 order by U. S. District Judge Michael Sheridan, the squatters filed briefs replying to recent federal moves for a court order to get possession of the controversial dam project area along the Delaware River currently occupied by the squatters.

The U. S. Justice Department filed a civil eviction suit against the squatters last Nov. 14 after previous attempts at criminal prosecution had failed.

The squatters have been fighting the suit since then under the direction of the Squatter Legal Team utilizing the services of some 19 unpaid but "sympathetic" lawyers in Washington, D.C. and New York City.

This spring, when the government attempted to speed the case along by asking for a court motion stating it (the government) was the legal property owner, the squatter legal team countered by requesting separate jury hearings on the suit for all 171 named defendants.

On July 3, Judge Sheridan ruled that the squatters were living illegally on federal land, but issued no eviction order. The squatters have appealed this ruling.

On July 13, the government requested a judgement by the judge to conclude the suit by granting federal officers an order of possession of the property. This would force eviction of the squatters.

The government attorneys also requested they be allowed to withdraw a request for unstipulated court relief to the squatting situation along the Delaware as a move to make the federal case more solid and logical in light of subsequent motions and counter-motions filed since the original suit was filed.

"We had better start fining people soon to show them we mean business," Hunt said of the borough's ordinance outlawing overgrown weeds.

Gypsy moth-eaten trees fight back

By LORA SHARPE

STROUDSBURG — A second spring has come to the Poconos, residents of formerly gypsy moth-eaten areas say.

What's more, environmentalists report, moth devastation may be greatly reduced next year.

Refoliation of trees destroyed by the insects is underway now in places stripped of their greenery by the moths in early summer.

"It's just as green up here as it would've been last spring," said an enthusiastic Mrs. Esther Motts, better known as Pocono Pete to Big Pocono State Park watchers.

Mrs. Linda Salmon of Henryville reported that the hills that looked bare on July 1 are now lovely again.

Big Pocono is a prime example of refoliation, according to Paul Drury of the Department of Environmental Research. The denuded scrub oak on the mountainside is showing new leaves now, he said.

Drury explained that such refoliation is normal. However, he added, the trees affected by the gypsy moth don't refoliate to their full size.

Coniferous trees, such as pine and hemlock, have a harder time producing greenery again than deciduous trees such as oak and maple.

Also, refoliation weakens a tree. After three years of successive re-greening, a tree cannot survive through the winter, Drury said.

This is the fifth year Monroe County has been invaded by the moth; Pike County's troubles, however, started a year earlier.

Agnew: Accusations 'damned lies'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew denied Wednesday as "damned lies" allegations that he was involved in a kickback scheme in Maryland, but disclosed that a federal grand jury is investigating him for possible tax fraud, extortion, conspiracy and bribery violations.

At a news conference called one day after he conferred with President Nixon, Agnew said he would fight to prove his innocence rather than resign.

But he confirmed that a federal grand jury in his native city of Baltimore is "in the process of investigating me." He expressed confidence he would not be indicted.

"I have absolutely nothing to hide," Agnew said at the half-hour news conference, and "I have no intention of being skewered" by news reports of allegations against him by unnamed sources.

Federal prosecutors were reported to be looking into an alleged scheme by prominent Maryland Republicans to influence federal contract awards in return for cash kickbacks or political contributions from construction firms. Agnew was governor of Maryland for two years before he became vice president in 1969.

Agnew acknowledged Monday that he was under federal investigation for "possible violations of the criminal statutes" by a team of prosecutors led by George Beall, the Republican U.S. attorney for Maryland whom Nixon appointed in 1970.

But until Agnew spoke out in his defense Wednesday and made public a letter he received from Beall last Thursday, there had been no word that the case had reached the grand jury. "I have no expectation of being indicted," Agnew said.

Beall's letter was addressed to Judah Best, the Washington lawyer Agnew said he hired in early April after hearing "cocktail circuit" rumors as long ago as February that an investigation was under way and his name had been mentioned.

Beall informed Agnew's lawyer that he was investigating "allegations concerning possible violations by your client and others of federal criminal statutes, including but not limited to Sect. 371 (conspiracy), Sect. 1951 (extortion) and Sect. 1952 (extortion and bribery) of Title 18, United States Code, and certain criminal provisions of the laws of the United States (Title 26, United States Code.)"

Agnew told his news conference he also was under investigation for possible tax fraud.

Beall said that if Agnew chose to cooperate, he should submit all bank records and state and federal income tax returns dating back to Jan. 1, 1967, and turn them over no later than 2 p.m. EDT today.

Agnew said he retained outside counsel to consider the grand jury's request for his financial papers and other matters, including his constitutional status as vice president. He stressed that through his lawyer, he wanted Beall "to thoroughly understand that I would in no way attempt to impede the investigation."

An attorney for Agnew said he had spoken to Beall and that there would be no action on the grand jury's request until he and Beall had conferred again some time next week.

Agnew declined to comment on most other questions about his intentions, deferring to his lawyer's advice on what he called "highly unprecedented constitutional questions" about his legal status as vice president.

Under close, intensive questioning during the half-hour news conference in the Executive Office Building, adjacent to the White House, Agnew said he first became aware of the grand jury investigation last February when some friends told him of "rumors in the cocktail circuit" that he might be involved.

He said he retained counsel in early April and discussed the rumors with Gen. Alexander M. Haig, a presidential aide who later succeeded the ousted H. R. Haldeman as White House chief of staff.

Last Thursday, the vice president said, he received a letter from the U.S. Attorney for Maryland, George Beall, informing him he was under investigation for "possible violations of the criminal statutes."

Under questioning, Agnew said the letter listed possible bribery, tax fraud, extortion and conspiracy charges. Agnew said he "very shortly" informed the President through Haig, but did not speak to Nixon directly until they met for an hour and 45 minutes on Tuesday at the President's hideaway office in the Executive Office Building.

The grand jury has been investigating the entire matter since January.

Economy control end in sight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House hopes to end all government wage and price controls as soon as possible, perhaps by the end of the year, high administration officials said Wednesday.

They said the administration wants to shift as quickly as possible from the Phase IV controls, which begin Monday, to a Phase V "phase-out" of all government controls on the economy, returning it to a free market basis.

One spokesman said the White House is counting on increased production, especially of food, as well as government action to dampen the inflationary pressures so that controls can be lifted without the return of inflation.

Chairman Herbert Stein of the President's Council of Economic Advisors said the public was more prepared for this complete phase-out now because most businessmen and other Americans appear to be "disillusioned" with the controls, although he said this disillusionment is apparently "only skin deep."

"We will get out of controls," Stein told an American Bar Association luncheon in Washington. But he said President Nixon's use of economic controls would make it easier for future Presidents to put similar restraints on the free economy.

The administration assures that it wants to get out of controls from several spokesmen in widely scattered parts of the country the day after Phase IV regulations were announced for most of the economy. Generally, firms may increase prices only to the extent of their increased costs.

Commerce Secretary Frederick B. Dent told the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce that Phase V will be a "phase-out" to a free economy. But in the meantime, he said Phase IV would be a period in which "other economic forces can work effectively to slow down inflation without subjecting the public to the severe price jolts which might otherwise occur."

In Miami, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz told the Economic Society of Southern Florida that Phase IV was moving the economy toward private decision-making and "Phase V will be phased out."

High administration sources said the White House hoped the phase-out to a free economy could come by the end of this year, although none of the official spokesmen went on record predicting decontrols that soon.

In other developments:

—Butz announced a nationwide drive to spur farmers and other agriculture industry officials to higher food production by preventing harvest losses this fall and promoting all-out production next year.

—The Agriculture Department predicted that despite belt-tightening shifts to cheaper foods, the proportion of average consumer income spent for food will increase in 1973 for the first time in 15 years because of higher food prices.

HARRISBURG — An aide to Gov. Milton Shapp released Wednesday a report on Liquor Control Board member Daniel Pennick showing he was indicted in a federal government kickback scheme in 1964. The charges later were dismissed.

The release of the information by aide Norval Reece was designed to put an end to the "mystery" of a file on Pennick referred to by ousted LCB legal counsel Alexander Jaffurs in testimony before a House committee administration already trying to recover prestige and credibility eroded by Watergate.

Nixon was in his suite of offices in the Executive Office Building when Agnew held his nationally televised news conference, but according to spokesmen, he did not watch it.

Other than the statement of continued confidence, the White House has refused to comment on the allegations against Agnew.

Accompanying Nixon on the half-hour helicopter ride to Camp David was Raymond Price, an adviser and chief speechwriter, and a secretary, Pat Nixon and daughter Tricia Cox were already vacationing at the presidential lodge.

White House officials said the President would be preparing a major television address he plans to make to the nation proclaiming innocence of involvement in the Watergate affair and appealing for confidence in his leadership. They said it would probably be made next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Vice President has Nixon's confidence

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Nixon issued a statement expressing confidence in his vice president Wednesday and flew to Camp David with a speechwriter to prepare his own public defense in the Watergate case.

He was expected to remain at the mountain retreat through the weekend.

Nixon left the White House by helicopter about an hour after Spiro T. Agnew appeared on national television to brand as a "damned lie" allegations that he was involved in a kickback scheme while governor of Maryland.

Earlier, White House spokesman Gerald L. Warren issued a statement for Nixon saying the fact that Agnew was under investigation by the U.S. attorney's office in Baltimore was "no reason for the President to change his attitude about the vice president or his confidence in the vice president."

Nixon met for almost two hours Tuesday with Agnew to discuss the new development, one which dealt another blow to an

Phila. district attorney now investigating Mayor Rizzo

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — District Attorney Arlen Specter Wednesday ordered an immediate investigation into charges Mayor Frank L. Rizzo offered the city's Democratic leader a deal to accept the mayor's candidate for district attorney.

Specter said he instructed two assistants, one of them in charge of the investigating grand jury, to proceed with the probe after disclosure by Democratic City Chairman Peter J. Camiel that Rizzo offered to let him select architects for city projects in return for slating city Managing Director Hillel S. Levinson on last May's primary ballot.

Camiel's committee, instead, selected F. Emmett Fitzpatrick Jr., who won his party's nomination and will face Specter in the November election. At the time of Fitzpatrick's selection last March, Rizzo accused Camiel of "bossism."

The mayor, who opposed Fitzpatrick, said Camiel's accusations of a political deal were "absolutely untrue."

According to Camiel, Rizzo offered him the deal at a mid-city hotel luncheon last Feb. 27. The mayor claims he simply offered Camiel a list of alternative candidates.

"I told him I'd take anybody but Fitzpatrick," Rizzo claimed, objecting to the nominee's qualifications.

The Democratic leader said Rizzo continued to badger him about slating Levinson at a dinner three days later.

"The mayor once more demanded I put Levinson across for DA," Camiel said. "He got nasty. He threatened."

Court supports bombing

NEW YORK (UPI) — A three-judge federal appeals panel Wednesday reversed a lower court decision and ruled that the bombing of Cambodia officers. Rep. Holtzman said she would appeal to the Supreme Court.

A similar suit brought by four congressmen and an airman was dismissed in Boston earlier in the day.

The ruling came a week before President Nixon has said he will stop bombing in Cambodia in accordance with congressional legislation.

Arguing for the antiwar side, attorney Burt Neuborne claimed that Congress never specifically authorized funds to be spent on bombing Cambodia and that the administration had always justified operations in Cambodia and North Vietnam on the grounds that they protected American troops in South Vietnam.

After hearing three hours of arguments, the panel decided 2-1 to reverse the earlier ruling.

Acting to reverse were acting Chief Circuit Judge William H. Mulligan and Judge Williams H. Timbers. Judge James L. Oakes dissented.

General admits approving secret bombing targets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Creighton W. Abrams said Wednesday he personally approved secret bombing targets in Cambodia and their coverup targets in South Vietnam while he commanded all U.S. forces in Southeast Asia.

In testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Abrams said there might be one more untold segment of secret U.S. military operations in the Indochina war. "There was one classified operation in the early years of the war that I don't believe that I'm authorized to talk about," he said.

Abrams' testimony was part of an investigation into aspects of the war that were never reported to Congress — and in cases like the 14-month Cambodian bombing campaign which began in March of 1969 — were covered up by false reports.

Two former soldiers and a former Air Force pilot also described U.S. ground and air attacks on Communist hospitals in earlier testimony Wednesday.

Also on Wednesday, Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall refused Wednesday to issue an injunction to immediately halt present U.S. bombing of Cambodia, while antiwar members of Congress tried in two courts to stop military activity in Indochina.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., argued three hours in the U.S. Court of Appeals in New York City that a lower court decision to halt the bombing should be upheld. U.S. District Judge Orrin Judd said last month that the government was bombing without constitutional authority. The 2nd Circuit Appeals Court set aside the decision until Wednesday's arguments.

Rep. Robert F. Drinan and three Democratic colleagues from Massachusetts — Michael J. Harrington, John J. Moakley and Gerry Studds — asked the district court in Boston to stop the bombing of Cambodia. Judge Joseph L. Tauro dismissed the suit, saying Congress already had resolved the issue by setting an Aug. 15 deadline.

In his testimony, Abrams said, "I nominated the targets in Cambodia and I nominated the other targets in South Vietnam." He told the committee he reported the bombing to the Joint Chiefs of which he is now a member, but did not know who ordered the bombing cover-up.

Abrams said he never told Congress because "I wasn't asked about it." That prompted Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, to ask whether "there is anything else I should ask you about."

The general mentioned the classified operation in his answer but provided no information about it.

Gerald J. Greven of Miami told the committee he had personally directed a fighter-bomber attack on a suspected underground hospital in April, 1969, while serving as a forward air controller in South Vietnam.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma had a full day of scientific studies of Earth's resources, man's nearest star and themselves.

Dr. Lawrence F. Dietlein, deputy director of life sciences at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the pilots had no medical problems and were adapting to the weightless environment. He said they were completely over their bout with motion sickness that slowed down their work in the big lab the first few days.

"They are in excellent spirits and have no medical problems or complaints that we know of," Dietlein said at a news briefing.

Bean, Garriott and Lousma have lost about five pounds each, mostly in body fluids, said Dr. Michael Whittle, chief investigator for the food and mineral balance studies on Skylab.

Dietlein said tests in a whirling chair show the astronauts are no longer susceptible to motion sickness and have adapted to zero-gravity. He said there have been no heart irregularities.

The astronauts did not exercise at all the first five days because of their motion sickness, said Edward Michel, principal investigator for medical tests conducted on a stationary bicycle. Michel said each member of the crew has been asked to exercise for an hour a day.

It was the fifth earth resources photographic sweep for the Skylab 2 mission, a 35-minute pass from Oregon to the Atlantic coast of Brazil. Clouds blotted part of the view over Nevada, Colorado and Texas, disappointing Lousma.

"Nothing but clouds and brown," Lousma said nearing the Gulf coast. "The whole coast is clobbered in. Doggone it. Shucks."

Lousma had problems with a viewer tracking instrument that points the cameras at desired targets on the ground.

"I don't think it's going to make us close up the shop, but it's going to make it a little trickier," said Lousma.

New guerrilla faction claims airport attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — An unknown Arab guerrilla faction calling itself the "Seventh Suicide Squad" has claimed responsibility for Sunday's gun-and-grenade attack at Athens airport and said it was directed specifically against Americans, two Beirut newspapers reported Wednesday.

The newspapers An Nahar and Al Anwar said the claim was made in leaflets delivered to their offices and addressed to the American people.

"We have discovered that in order to make you understand us and realize our right to live, we must begin to defend ourselves against all those who seek to exterminate us," the leaflet said.

"We have decided to adopt your criminal methods and teach the first lesson to the people which is undertaking a campaign of extermination against us."

Two Americans were among the three persons killed when two Arab guerrillas in Athens threw grenades in the crowded terminal and sprayed passengers with machinegun bullets. The other fatality was an Austrian.

A spokesman for the Palestinian guerrilla leadership denied that the leaflet was authentic, saying the "Seventh Suicide Squad" was a "fictitious and non-existent" organization.

"Nothing but clouds and brown," Lousma said nearing the Gulf coast. "The whole coast is clobbered in. Doggone it. Shucks."

Lousma had problems with a viewer tracking instrument that points the cameras at desired targets on the ground.

"I don't think it's going to make us close up the shop, but it's going to make it a little trickier," said Lousma.

Chestnuthill planner probe sparks supervisors' tizzy

By MAUREEN RUFFE

Pocono Record Reporter

BRODHEADSVILLE — A letter sent out to 20 "alleged subdivision violators" in Chestnuthill Township last month caused minor sparks to fly Tuesday night between the municipality's supervisors and the chairman of the planning commission.

As a result of the confrontation, however, the two government bodies worked out a policy whereby the supervisors can be kept informed at all times as to what the planning commission is doing.

In the future Allen Conklin, chairman of the Chestnuthill Township Planning Commission, said copies of mass mailings to residents will be sent to the supervisors well in advance.

On a regular basis, copies of minutes of the board's sessions will be forwarded to each supervisor for review.

Visibly irritated, Supervisor Chairman Albert Frantz asked Conklin how he would feel if he got a call from somebody about a township letter and he didn't know anything about it.

Frantz said the planning commission isn't an enforcement agency and shouldn't be sending out letters to people saying they are going to be fined.

Conklin explained that the letters were not sent out to penalize anyone. He said they requested that residents appear to see if they were in violation of the township's subdivision ordinance.

Solicitor Lester Brown said his office had prepared the letters and explained that the paragraph on fines merely repeated the wording of the penalty clause.

Conklin said he felt the board did have a right to see such letters in the future and he agreed to furnish the supervisors with minutes on a regular basis.

Adding, however, that he had something "to get off his chest," Conklin said the planning commission was appointed by the supervisors and that because of their three meetings each month, the planners knew more about the subdivision ordinance than the supervisors.

"There's something that just sticks in my craw," he said. "We all put a lot of time in here that's donated and I get the feeling that the supervisors don't have enough confidence in the planners."

"It seems like if the planners do something that doesn't suit you, bam, and you'll step on us," he continued. "I, for one, would like to operate with no strings attached."

The supervisors, at the conclusion of the discussion, agreed to let 25 additional letters go out this month to the remaining alleged subdivision violators in the township.

the Sugar Hollow area, one road in John Nash's Sunny Brook development and Legion Lane East and Legion Lane West near the West End Fairgrounds.

Also, Don Smith's Westview Drive, Hillside Drive, Hansen Lane and Hemlock Drive in McMichael's Hillside Terrace, and Chris Sautter's Aspen Lane, Beech Lane, Ash Lane, Pine Street and Cedar Lane, all of Sherwood Forest.

The supervisors agreed to grant only one 30-day extension on the takeover requirement to a landowner represented at the meeting by John Nash.

Nash claimed that the supervisors verbally approved takeover of the developer's roads and asked that certain changes be made in the construction months ago.

Because Nash claimed the landowner didn't understand that petitions needed to be submitted for final takeover, the supervisors granted the extension.

Developers dash deadline

BRODHEADSVILLE — A total of 14 roads were dedicated and accepted for takeover by the Chestnuthill Township Supervisors Tuesday night.

Developers and landowners crowded the Brodheadsville municipal building to make sure their roads were accepted before the township's blacktopping ordinance went into effect this week.

Passed one year ago, the code required all roads to be blacktopped if they were dedicated for takeover after August 1, 1973.

At their July meeting, however, the supervisors extended the effective date of the ordinance to August 7 to allow residents enough time to get the required petitions to their township solicitor.

Special ordinances were passed Tuesday night to take over the following roads: a road located in Franklin Longenbach's development west of Effort between Rte. 209 and Rte. 115, Herbert Gower's Sugar Hill Road in

Pocono twp. to slow pace

TANNERSVILLE — The Pocono Township Supervisors will take action on a petition by residents to lower the township speed limit.

The petition, signed by 65 Scotrun residents and submitted to Police Chief Daniel L. Harnden and the township supervisors, dealt with lowering the speed limit on the portion of Scotrun Avenue where a child was seriously injured.

Solicitor for the supervisors, Detlef A. Hansen, said, "The most logical solution is to adopt an ordinance that regulates the speed throughout the township at 35 mph."

Hansen said he would contact the traffic department in Allentown concerning the legality of the proposed ordinance.

Chairman Horace Raish said the supervisors have delayed taking action because many other residents petitioned the supervisors to take similar action in different parts of the township.

Hansen said the supervisors cannot put a water pipe on private property.

Mt. Pocono day camp final phase

MOUNT POCONO — Two weeks remain for the Mount Pocono Day Camp which according to director Wayne Boyd has been very successful.

Children spend from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday developing their minds and bodies while having fun.

Four capable counselors along with Boyd teach the children swimming, sports, arts and crafts and gymnastics. Other activities include movies and hikes.

Registrations are still being accepted for the final two weeks, Aug. 13-17 and Aug. 20-24. Cost per child for the two week session is $25. Each child must bring swimming suit, towel, lunch and a beverage.

Interested parents may write Wayne Boyd, Box 224, Mount Pocono, 18344.

The supervisors, at the conclusion of the discussion, agreed to let 25 additional letters go out this month to the remaining alleged subdivision violators in the township.

Help available for drug users

What happens when a parent discovers his child is messing around with drugs, smoking pot or puffing hashish?

Usually, the reaction is in three stages — rage, bafflement and fear:

"How could you do this to us?", "Why did this happen; what went wrong?", "What's going to happen now; what can we do?"

That much is predictable. What happens next, though, is what is really important.

That's where the county's Mental Health office and its Drug and Alcohol Clinic come in.

Don't ever make the mistake of thinking you can handle this situation yourself. You can't. If you could, your child probably never would have wound up using drugs in the first place.

The D & A Clinic has a staff trained to deal with such problems. They also have the ability to talk with the young drug experimenter on a one-to-one basis. They speak the language. And speaking the language of drugs is the first step in developing the sort of rapport needed to begin the process of understanding and the task of correction — or help.

The drug scene has been pushed below the surface by other news development lately, but it is still there, throbbing away like a rotten tooth. It is still bringing heartache to parents and tragedy to young people. It's something to be aware of.

By all means, don't relax your vigilance. Should you spot any of the danger signs of drug use — hypertension, unusual change in a child's habits or personality, telltale physical changes — feel free to indulge in any of the reactions we listed earlier. But once your head has cooled, get in touch with the D & A Clinic. They can help if you're willing to let them.

Togetherness cheaper

Paradise Township voters, according to the board, will be asked to approve a township police force and township refuse collection system, both worthwhile additions to municipal service in a growing area.

The costs aren't out of line, either. For an area with Paradise's ratables, nine mills extra is about right.

But other townships and the county itself ought to consider how much less both functions would cost individual taxpayers if they were provided and paid for on a county-wide basis.

It's the old concept of regionalism again. Studies done on the county and state levels have shown that you save considerably in terms of efficiency by furnishing vital services on a broad rather than on a piece-meal, every-man-for-himself basis.

With at least five municipalities in Monroe County pledged to work together on common problems and needs, it seems that a logical extension would be to consider furnishing such services by similar action.

Then there always is the possibility of a county home rule charter providing for such services. Isn't it about time the county began to study the whys and wherefores of such a charter? East Stroudsburg is looking into it on an informal basis. We suggest the county might do the same.

For the overprivileged

Writer Stephen Birmingham has come up with a book on the ambience of the rich and mighty. It is mostly anecdotes of their weird doings such as this quote by Business Week:

There is the one about the woman dining at New York's fashionable Union Club and commenting to the headwaiter after glancing icily across the room,

"I see you now also admit the mistresses, as well as the wives, of members."

To which the headwaiter is said to have replied,

"Only if they are also the wives of other members, madam."

Don't go to college

"Only 20 per cent of jobs for adults require a college degree yet two-thirds of high school graduates are going to college. Vocational Schools are badly needed but they are tough to get into because most money is spent for general high school buildings and nonvocational teaching." We thought we would quote the preceding to assure our readers that we are thinking . . . even obtusely.

The McTavish was just sitting down to lunch when they noticed friends coming up the walk.

"Oh, dear," said Mrs. McTavish. "I'll bet they haven't eaten yet."

"Quick," replied Mr. McTavish. "Everybody out on the porch with toothpicks."

Christian pseudo concern

Do you want to achieve concrete results in the Third World — such as higher standards of living, more rapid development, better health and educational standards, and so on?

Or do you wish to express "concern," put forward an image suggesting "commitment" and "involvement"?

Increasingly, this seems to be becoming an either - or choice. Increasingly, too, socially concerned priests and ministers and outfits like the World Council of Churches are opting for the image of concern over the actuality of accomplishment. Moreover, the policies connected with the image of concern work against the practical goals such socially concerned Christians claim that they desire. Paradoxically enough, Christian "concern" these days seems to go hand in hand with a massive indifference to actual consequences.

Two main routes

Broadly speaking, there exist two main routes today to alleviating the lot of underdeveloped nations.

First, there is the redistributive approach, as espoused by such socialist regimes as Castro's Cuba and Allende's Chile.

Second, there is the investment - growth approach, as exemplified by Nigeria, Malaysia and Brazil.

As James V. Schall, a professor of political science and a notable scholar on the subject of development, has pointed out: It "is astonishing how quickly many theologians and church organizations have identified with radical and socialist movements proposing an improved lot for their people." In the name of Christian concern they have thus identified themselves with "A restrictive and largely obsolete movement," which is "incapable of achieving the levels and quality of life available."

As Schall and other students of the subject recognize, the economic performance of the Castros and Allendes has been dismal. Even the New York Times, which gave Castro a big assist on his way to power, had this to say editorially last week: Castro's "mistakes have been costly to the Cuban people both in economic welfare and in personal freedom, while his policies have led Cuba into an even greater dependence on the Soviet Union than pre - Castro Cuba was on the United States."

Allende's problems involve virtually unrestrained domestic violence, a $461 billion deficit, 300 per cent inflation, a 20 per cent drop in agricultural production, and a crippling copper strike.

The root economic fact is that the capital and the skills needed for development in such Third World nations are not available internally.

How Allende looks at it

Last December, President Salvador Allende delivered a major speech to the U.N. General Assembly. In it he made the assumption that if investors pay Chile $1 billion for the raw copper in its ground, and then sell that copper for $9 billion, the difference belongs to Chile. In fact, ore in the ground is just ore in the ground, and the $8 billion difference has little to do with Chile.

The largely ignored truth happens to be that since World War II, international business enterprise has emerged as the single most potent force for development in the Third World. It, virtually alone, possesses the available capital and the technological experience to promote development. The closed, relatively static socialist states of the Allendes and Castros merely - on dogmatic grounds - cut their peoples off from participation with these enterprises in development projects. In the name of "redistribution," these socialist states merely divide a static or shrinking pie.

In point of fact, business - not the U.N. - is the functioning "internal organization" with the tools for development.

But in the name of "Christian concern," advanced spokesmen in the Christian community have been backing the static, profoundly reactionary socialist alternative.

Letters to the Editor

Mad leading the blind?

Editor, The Record:

The image of President Nixon emerging from these Watergate hearings, particularly in the last two weeks, is of a man without sensory perceptions of his own. His famed isolation seems horrifyingly close to total.

He reads only what Pat Buchanan wants him to read; for years he heard only of those problems Messrs. Erlichman-Haldeman wanted him to hear; and he feels the public's will only when it reaches a rage.

He is a man contained in a self-created cell. To allow his intellect the unencumbered banality it needs to bring us Peace for a Generation, he has allowed a few crude, proto-fascist hacks the freedom to ride roughshod over the Constitution.

Former Vice President Nixon once remarked to Teddy White that America doesn't need a president for domestic affairs — a competent cabinet will suffice. America needs a president for foreign affairs, the presidential candidate said.

A character in "King Laer" said something similar. "I have no way, and therefore want no eyes. I stumbled when I saw." But later the same character admits, "Tis the time's plague when madmen lead the blind."

Editor, The Record:

The person who wrote the letter to your column in a recent paper is really right.

Just why must the good die? It really seems to me the more a person lies or cheats, the better he is; he can get away with anything.

For me, I have lived here in my own home for about 25 or 30 years, and now I must give it up. What for? The government wants to build something.

What does the government want to build? Hard to tell what it will be after they get all the homes here on the street — maybe a gas station or a park for the city people to come and enjoy themselves.

Prejudicial Ellsberg hearings sought

WASHINGTON — To drum up prejudice against Daniel Ellsberg while the government was preparing its case against him in 1971, the White House secretly asked a congressional committee to hold hearings on his theft of the Pentagon Papers.

The appeal for Ellsberg hearings was made by White House officials to the House Committee on Internal Security through the office of its cagey chairman, Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., in June 1971. This was the same committee which the young Rep. Richard Nixon used as his stepping stone to national publicity 25 years ago with the Alger Hiss - Pumpkin Papers case.

Ichord's aide William Hecht confirmed to us that a White House official called him and confided: "Some committee is going to investigate this matter. It should be one with genuine interest in the national security."

When several more pressing calls followed, Hecht began to wonder just who at the White House was so eager for the hearings.

"Is this something the President wants done?" Hecht inquired.

"Yes," was the immediate White House response.

Ichord cautioned his aide that with criminal charges pending against Ellsberg, he would not risk prejudicing the case with pretrial publicity unless national security arguments were overwhelming.

"The only way I'd go ahead with this is if the President personally asked me," he instructed Hecht. Dutifully, the staffer informed the White House. Sure enough, within days a call came to Ichord from his acquaintance in the oval office, Richard Nixon.

As Ichord told us with a chuckle, "I thought, 'how am I going to be able to talk him out of this?'" But President Nixon made it easy by not bringing up the probe. And when Ichord shrewdly avoided bringing it up himself, the President warmly wished Ichord a "Happy Birthday" and hung up.

Footnote: Today, the shoe is tightly on the other foot. Ex - Nixon aides face prosecution in the Watergate debacle and are now loudly complaining that their own cases are being prejudiced by congressional hearings.

Safety Sabotages: As chairman of a House committee on the infirm, hard - working Rep. John Brademas, D - Ind., has labored for years to lift the burdens of the elderly, the crippled and the retarded.

But in private letters to the Department of Transportation, Brademas successfully opposed forcing bus manufacturers to make boarding safer for the aged and handicapped. Instead, he helped throw a $24 million contract to his home - town bus firm which had refused to agree to the safety measures.

To be fair, Brademas is a liberal from a conservative district where every one of the 4,000 voters at AM General's vehicle plants in South Bend, Ind., casts a vital ballot.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Nightmare

Unpleasant dreams seem to be as old as mankind. One type of frightening dream that has been recorded for centuries is a feeling of suffocation, as if something heavy were resting on one's chest.

Centuries ago, the Anglo-Saxons attributed such a dream to a demon or fiend that lay on top of a sleeping person.

Such a demon was called a "mare." Since it was active at night, the demon acquired, in English, the name "nightmare."

Now "nightmare" refers to any wild, unpleasant or frightening dream.

Not surprisingly, with the specifications now tailored to AM General's measure, the firm won the $24 million contract. The losers, of course, were the tens of millions of elderly and handicapped who looked to Brademas for help.

Footnote: Brademas insisted that "providing a bus with substantial advantages for the elderly and the handicapped was never an issue." It was solely a matter of whether "WMATA would be allowed to use restrictive specifications to discriminate against" AM General, he explained.

At the Department of Transportation, a spokesman contended a compromise with AM General was proper. He said Brademas' concern was "welcomed by us," but was unnecessary since Transportation's own appeal system was already working toward a fair solution.

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Every year we analyze the costs of a European vacation, and each year note the rising prices of everything; we get pragmatically introspective about the international inflation, privately bemoan the fiscal inroads on our personal exchequer and wind up sighing, what the hell, we mightn't be able to get there at all next year; Europe might be inaccessible for many reasons; and we go.

We get the same feeling about taking a ship to Europe and wind up with the same sigh: who knows what the inflationary inroads will do in the future to surface travel abroad; already airlines are considerably cheaper, student fares for our two offspring make it even more reasonable; then we read that the great ocean-crossing Italian ships have lost millions of dollars and seem certain soon to quit their ocean chores; again we plan to go by ship, at least one way. We pull in our money belt a few notches. Again, it's what the hell, how long more will the Queen Elizabeth 2 be able to traverse the Atlantic in such regal fashion, and it's off again by ship to England.

It will be a shame if luxury sea travel disappears; it's the British pride that keeps its Cunard liners sailing, certainly not assurances of profit to Cunard that keep it afloat. Apart from the Italian liners, and the French Line, Cunard sails the last of the proud big ships. The American shipping industry long ago gave up the ships, the big, fastest United States stashed in mothballs at Norfolk, Va., with no place to go, awaiting what everyone is confident never will happen — another war — but, keeping its essentials ready just in case. As the world's great ocean-traversing passenger ships decline in number and frequency — most shift to the American cruise trade during the winter — it's off we go into the water green yonder.

155 to 98: (Q.) My girl friend and I are very close. Because I love her I have to come to you for advice. You see, she was really heavy. She weighed 155. I teased her. I said she looked like a basketball in her bikini. She said she was going on a diet.

She quit eating anything she thought was fattening. Now she weighs 98 but she is very pale. A few nights ago I took her out. We went to a restaurant. She looked at all the food and turned white and fainted. I took her home right off, but she made me promise not to say anything about it to her mother.

When I went over to her house today she was in bed. What should I do?Afraid in Pennsylvania

(A.) You should tell her mother everything that has happened. She should have consulted a doctor before she went on a diet. Now she should go, or be taken, to him immediately.

It is possible that she has some illness in addition to the weakness that is normal with intense weight loss.

No girl or boy should go on a diet without seeing a doctor first, getting his advice, following it, and returning to him at intervals for a checkup.

SECRET LETTER: (Q.) My family and I went up to Canada for three weeks. I met Jerry there. He is my age, 16. I like him. But my parents found out about him and grounded me. I am not supposed to even look at a boy. They say I am too young.

Well, Jerry wrote me and I got the letter without my mother seeing it. It was very friendly. I thought I would never see him again, so I wrote him back. But I just found out we're going back up there. When my parents find out about Jerry and me writing each other they'll kill me.

They will find out because Jerry and my brother are friends and my brother will hear about the letter. What can I do?

Starved affection

Yesterday I took her to an amusement park. She looked like death warmed over but said she felt all right. We went on the fast ride. When she got off she grabbed her stomach and couldn't straighten up. She started to cry. I carried her to the car, and again she made me promise not to tell her mother.

When I went over to her house today she was in bed. What should I do?

Part of the fascination of the antique show for its patrons is to compare and marvel at the prices which articles they once owned and either gave away or discarded now command.

But for the canny investor, there's also the speculation about what prices they will command in the future.

The Pocono Mountains Antique Show for the benefit of the General Hospital of Monroe County, now being held in the Tom Waring gymnasium at East Stroudsburg High School, is one of the best of its kind in the East with many of the 40 dealers bringing many of their choicest pieces, for what knowledgeable patrons were referring to yesterday as "a beautiful show".

Either that hypothetical grandmother must have been an immaculate housekeeper or her heirs will have to do a lot of hard work.

The silver is gleaming, the crystal and cut glass sparkle, the furniture, of which there is an unusually fine assortment this year, has that "rubbed-in shine", and the china is displayed to show its pattern to advantage.

The show is also proving a meeting ground for friends from many areas, and a summer reunion for many auxiliary members who are working at the show. Mrs. Edward

No-bake ceramic project

Flower pot decoration made with corn starch clay

By PHYLLIS FIOROTTA

Who said you need a kiln to become a ceramic craftsman? Actually, a few pantry products are all you'll require to make the "Flowers in a Pot" window hanging shown here. You may want to enlarge the design for a wall hanging.

1. Cut out the design's bow, flowers, leaves, and pot to form individual patterns. Glue to cardboard.

2. To make the no-bake clay recipe: mix 1 cup corn starch, 2 cups baking soda and 1/4 cups cold water together; cook over medium heat for four minutes, stirring constantly. The mixture should resemble moist mashed potatoes. Cover with a damp cloth to cool.

3. Knead the clay as you would dough and roll out on a flat surface to a 1/4-inch thickness.

4. Place the patterns on the clay and cut around them with a sharp knife.

5. The top designs can be made with thin strips of rolled clay, moistened and pressed onto the cut shapes.

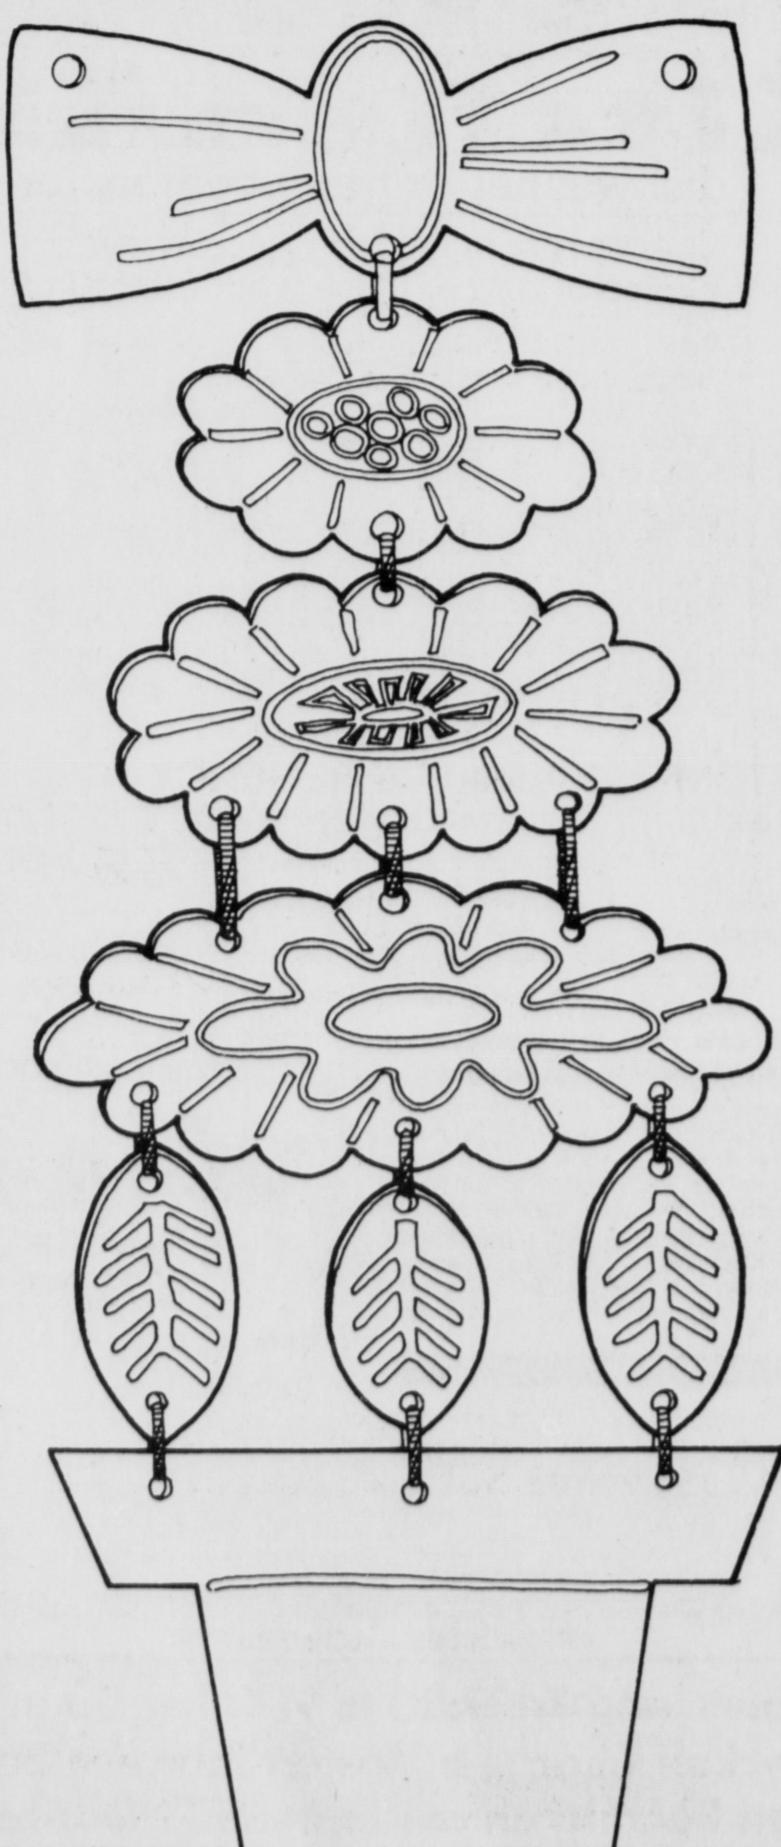

6. Use a nail to punch holes into the clay where the units will be tied to each other (see illustration).

7. Place on a wire rack or cookie sheet and dry overnight.

8. Dried pieces can be painted with poster or water color paints and can be finished with shellac, liquid plastic or clear nail polish.

9. Tie together with yarn, plastic cord or wire.

Need fresh air homes for city children

STROUDSBURG — "Would you like to share your home and the clean country air with a needy child for a week? Take a child swimming, fishing, boating, or to a ball game?"

These are the questions being posed to area residents by Jaycee Malcolm Law, chairman of the annual "Fresh Air" project sponsored by the Pocono Mountains Jaycees.

The intent of the project is

Lawn festival at Pocono Union Church

HENRYVILLE — Pocono Union Methodist Church will hold its annual lawn festival and bazaar on Saturday, Aug. 11, from noon to 7 p.m. Hot and cold foods including hot dogs and sauerkraut, baked beans, salads, coffees, soft drink, cake and ice cream will be sold for the church expense fund.

There will be white elephants and fancy work on sale.

At the services last Sunday, the speaker was Evelyn Shiffer, who was converted from Judaism to Christianity, and who spoke illustrating her topic "How Late Is It" with quotations from both the Old and New Testaments.

The pastor, Rev. David Humphrey, filled the pulpit at the Tobyhanna Methodist Church, but will conduct the 11 a.m. worship service this Sunday.

Tuckers' anniversary celebrated

HENRYVILLE — Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tucker of Phillipsburg, N.J., were honored by the Ladies Aid Society of the Pocono Union Methodist Church at a surprise luncheon in the Ladies Aid Hall, celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

The table arrangement of gold chrysanthemums and the anniversary wedding cake were presented to the guests of honor by the members. Mrs. Tucker is president of the Ladies Aid Society and both she and Mr. Tucker are active in the church.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett, Al Ragni, Mrs. Lottie Kiser, Miss Nancy Wood, Mrs. Lucy Raymond, Mrs. Blanche Hendershot, Mrs. Bessie Besecker, Mrs. Helen Soltis and Mrs. Dorothy Stewart.

The children are all under 12 years of age. They are all needy and are being carefully screened so there will be no major health or emotional problems.

Transportation to and from the Philadelphia area is provided for by the Pocono Mountains Jaycees.

"What the children need is to be out of the heat of the city, and have fresh air, trees, birds and green grass beneath their feet. A ride in the country, a Little League game, a fishing trip, or a family picnic would be fine. We don't expect host families to spend a lot of money on the children," stressed Law.

Last year, 13 area families were host to youngsters.

Families or individuals interested in taking a child into their home for a week may call Malcolm Law at 588-6756.

Traveling through the school to reach the gym, the music room was loud with the sound of a very junior band brass quartet, which if you recall brass instruments in the hands of neophytes gives you something of the same feeling as if somebody were breathing down the back of your neck.

Elsewhere in the corridors the cleaning crews were at work with floors and tile walls shining wetly. Nothing really smelled of chalk but my memory supplied it anyway.

Analysis: 3 years of wage, price controls

By JAMES P. GANNON
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

Next week, the U. S. economy will enter its third year under President Nixon's wage and price controls.

What began with a total freeze of wages and prices on Aug. 15, 1971, has evolved through a set of numbered phases into a highly complex system of regulations that is keeping thousands upon thousands of lawyers, accountants and bureaucrats busy.

Whatever else the controls program is accomplishing is less clear. Even its designers, remodelers and operators in the government aren't sure.

One of these insiders is Mrs. Marina Whitman, whose tenure, first as a member of Phase II Price Commission and then for the past 18 months as a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, almost matches the span of the controls period.

She plans to leave the government next week — on the second birthday of the controls, coincidentally — to return to teaching economics at the University of Pittsburgh. In a farewell interview the other day, the lady economist of the White House displayed a highly ambivalent attitude toward the controls program.

Mrs. Whitman isn't prepared to assert that the U. S. economy is better off today than it would have been if Nixon had kept his promise never to impose wage and price controls. "That's obviously the $64 question and I don't know the answer for certain," she confesses.

The success of the controls can be judged in two ways, she thinks. She makes no claim they have succeeded "in the narrowest sense," that is, in reducing the rate of inflation from what it would have been without any controls.

But her "tentative" judgment is that in a broader sense, the controls "have been helpful" in fostering a "more favorable combination of inflation and real growth" in production, employment and incomes than would have occurred otherwise.

A quick look at a few statistics illustrates what Mrs. Whitman is talking about. Comparing the latest official reading to that immediately prior to the imposition of controls, here's the two-year record on the inflation front:

Consumer prices: Up 8.4 per cent.

Retail food prices: Up 16.5 per cent.

Wholesale prices: Up 17.4 per cent.

This kind of record inspires great modesty among the White House phase-makers. But another set of similar comparisons show why they contend that their economic policies produced a rising economic tide that lifted all boats, despite the springing of inflationary leaks:

Civilian employment: Up 6.9 per cent.

Disposable personal income: Up 17.2 per cent.

Industrial production: Up 17.3 per cent.

Corporate profits: Up 46.1 per cent.

Such numbers, of course, measure the results only in a narrow economic sense, without considering important political, social and psychological consequences. On these grounds, Mrs. Whitman clearly has misgivings.

The resort to controls, she fears, may create an illusion "that when inflation gets too rapid for comfort, all you have to do is have the government impose wage and price controls and that will solve it."

Such thinking is "dangerous," she believes, because "it may tempt people to think that you don't have to do the other more fundamental and more painful things," such as controlling federal spending and keeping the money supply within reasonable bounds.

Furthermore, Mrs. Whitman worries, even if the U. S. manages to kick the controls habit soon, there may be a lasting susceptibility to their lure.

"Anytime in the future when you begin to have trouble with price stability," she predicts, "there is going to be very strong political and psychological pressure" to resume wage and price curbs. "You just can't stick that particular genie back in the bottle."

One thing that could prevent any future resort to controls, however, would be a renew disillusionment with their results. Public opinion, which has strongly supported the controls so far, shows signs of changing as the problems of Freeze II and Phase IV show up in the form of surging food prices, meat shortages and other dislocations.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Teacher's notebook

By JUDITH GELBER

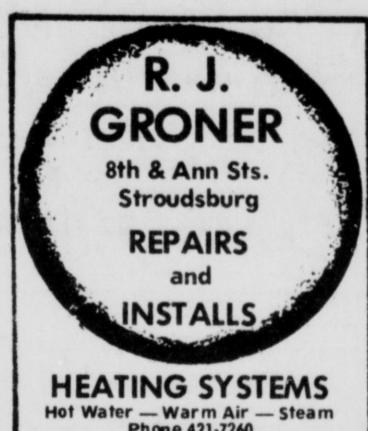

People who believe that teachers are overpaid for a short work week, lengthy mid-year school vacations and a two-month vacation every summer are not going to be impressed by discovering that their children's teachers are pumping gas into their cars, taking their dinner orders at a restaurant, or hammering nails into their house extensions.

But the fact is that many teachers must take on summer jobs during their "vacations" to make ends meet, let alone to enjoy some of the extras that most working people expect as a reward for diligent life-long labor.

Some teachers feel fortune is smiling on them when they get a summer teaching position. But teachers in elementary and secondary education in particular find that the remaining time between the end of the summer schedule

secretary
dies at 66

ROSETO — Joseph A. Trigiani, 66, of 318 Falcone Ave., Roseto, a well-known businessman and former borough secretary, died at his home Wednesday morning. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mamie (Ruggiero) Trigiani, at home.

Born in Roseto, Trigiani was the son of the late Anthony and Concetta (La Penna) Trigiani. He was a graduate of Bangor High School and attended East Stroudsburg Normal School (East Stroudsburg State College today), Duke University and Muhlenburg College, from which he received a B.S. degree in education.

He owned and operated Trigiani's Cut-Rate Store at 128 Garibaldi Ave., Roseto for the past 18 years. Prior to that he was a teacher for 27 years at the Columbus Elementary School in Roseto. He was Roseto borough secretary for 16 years.

A sportsman, Trigiani was instrumental in organizing the Roseto Red Jackets football team in 1934, and was an organizer of the Roseto Invitational Golf Tournament.

He was a U.S. Army sergeant in World War II, and was a past commander of the Martucci-Capobianco Post 750 of the American Legion at Roseto. He also belonged to the Legion's Eastern Judicial Sergeant-at-Arms group and the Chef-de-Gare of the 40 and Eight branch of the Legion.

He was a former secretary of the Marconi Social Club in Roseto. He was a member of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Roman Catholic Church, the Columbia Volunteer Fire Co., Roseto's Buffani Golden Jubilee Club and the Delaware Water Gap Country Club.

In addition to his widow he is survived by two sons, Anthony, at home, and John, Irvington, N.J.; a brother, Daniel, Roseto; and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Farino, Roseto, and Mrs. Grace Ceraul, Pen Argyl.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Schiavone Funeral Home, Bangor, followed by a 9:30 a.m. funeral Mass of Resurrection at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church.

Burial will be in the New Catholic Cemetery, Roseto.

MHMR manual given to local police forces

STROUDSBURG — Distribution of a mental health manual for use by police officers has begun through the Carbon, Monroe and Pike Counties Mental Health-Mental Retardation Program.

The manual, entitled "How to Recognize and Handle Abnormal People," is designed to help the police officer perfect techniques when dealing with a mentally ill person in the community.

Subjects of primary interest to law enforcement officers covered in the manual are: the alcoholic, the drug addict, the sex offender, is it a physical or mental illness, mental disorders in old age, handling a depressed person, the psychopathic personality, and how to handle a disturbed or violent person.

The purpose of authors Robert Matthews, M.D. and Lloyd Rowland, Ph.D. in writing the publication is stated, "to help police officers understand that abnormal or mentally ill people are sick people."

Input was also provided by law enforcement officers who read and have used earlier

Mild Monroe beef pinch tails nationwide shortage

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — "Have you felt the meat shortage?" a customer asked Abe Schreck of Schreck's Market Wednesday.

"Yes," Schreck replied, "and you will too next week."

Schreck expressed what many area meat market managers think. They find it harder to get the meat they order, there is a slight beef shortage, and it may get worse.

Warehouse Foods meat department manager Vic Bena acknowledged the shortage. He compensates by tripling beef orders to receive a normal supply.

The meat department manager at the Stroudsburg Acme Market, Roosevelt Lahr, said he is well stocked with beef. He said a shortage may develop in the future.

The beef trays in smaller markets aren't as full.

"I can get all the meat I want," Steve Moreken, owner of Steve's Market, said, "but I can't afford to buy it and sell it at the ceiling price."

Moreken gets 25 per cent of the beef he usually receives.

"Beef is extremely hard to get," Kinsley Meat Market manager Allen Merring said. "There may almost be no beef next week."

Only frozen imported beef like hamburger will be plentiful.

Markets will not be able to buy sides of beef next week, Moreken said. Processors will supply boneless cuts only, at higher prices.

Rustling deer seems to be someone's solution to high prices and shortages.

An official of the State Game Commission said Tuesday that meat prices have caused an increase in deer poaching.

Glenn Bower, the Game Commission's Executive Director, also said motorists are stealing deer carcasses along state highways.

Game protector David Overcash estimates that poaching and carcass stealing in the Poconos is increasing, although he does not have the statistics to back his statement yet.

Overcash's July report to Harrisburg shows he has picked up fewer carcasses than in past months. He attributes this to theft.

To support his poaching theory, Overcash cited the case of a commercial poaching ring he helped break up last October. Seven of nine alleged poachers in the Kunkletown area were found guilty of state game law violations.

Overcash said the game commission will increase patrols starting this fall to reduce poaching.

He also warned poachers about the $100 fine for killing a deer out of season.

"Regardless of the price of meat," he said, "you can buy a lot of beef for $100."

Sparks fly

Bob Sparks of Tamiment takes off Wednesday morning on what he hopes will be the first successful cross-Atlantic balloon trip. However, he

Spirit of Tamiment off in a fog

BAR HARBOR, Maine (UPI) — Robert Sparks lifted off early Wednesday in a coastal fog and headed east on his dream flight to become the first man to traverse the Atlantic in a balloon.

Sparks sailed over the ocean — without a radio — apparently on course in the balloon "Yankee Zephyr."

Sparks sailed over the ocean in the nine-story, red, white and blue "Yankee Zephyr" without apparent incident, using direct VHF radio contact for the first 150 miles. However, he was restricted to a line-of-sight radio contact with any ships or aircraft for the remainder of his voyage.

The Pennsylvania resort entertainment director strutted in the coastal chill to the nine-story balloon for the long delayed liftoff. The helium rushed into the huge limp, uncontrollable bag and the balloon grew quickly.

The crowd laughed when Sparks filed a mock flight plan for Le Bourget airport in Paris.

For a minute the looming red, white and blue balloon drifted low toward the coast. Then Sparks pulled a cord to unfurl a giant American flag beneath the gondola.

The balloon lifted gracefully over the runway fringe and slowly moved off into the distant mist. Sparks hunched over the gunwales of the gondola and watched as the crowd grew silent.

Sparks' flight was tracked by officials who keep tabs on overseas aircraft flights.

"When he was five or six years old he talked about flying across the Atlantic in a balloon," said Sparks' mother, Mrs. Laura S. Love of Martinsville, Va. "Back then he used to fill up plastic bags and see how high they would go."

"But I never thought about it again until a few years ago when he started talking about it for real," she said.

Four records could fall in Sparks' trip: first trans-Atlantic balloon crossing, first solo crossing, balloon distance record and gas balloon duration record.

"I'm not doing this to get my name in the record books," Sparks said.

Pike launches fair season with Del Val farm show

MILFORD — The county fair season starts today in Pike County with the Delaware Valley Fair and Farm Show.

The fair, perhaps one of the smallest around, is crammed into the Raymondskill Valley Grange Hall on Log Tavern Road outside of Milford.

Entries in the fair are concentrated in home industry categories — agricultural products, baking and sewing specimens, and flower displays.

The fair association awards over $500 in premiums for exhibits as diverse as chili sauce and an ecological craft work made from recycled materials.

The fair, while it is tiny, may be one of the best around. According to chairman Cynthia Van Lierde, the fair attracts more people now than ever before.

Most of the fair's new entrants, she said, are those summer residents of Pike who really enjoy making homemade things.

Mrs. Van Lierde speculated that city dwellers experience

SWIFTWATER — Increasing expenses in several areas and methods to deal with them dominated Wednesday's meeting of the Pocono Mountain School Board.

The board heard a communication from Mrs. Margaret Moyer, cafeteria supervisor, noting that increased food prices and raises for staff members could mean a cafeteria account deficit at the end of the 1973-74 school year if lunch prices are not increased from 35 cents to 40 cents.

Board President John Kerrick commented that he preferred to start the school year at the present 35-cent level, and only increase later if expenses absolutely dictate such a move. "We don't want to put our hot lunches right out of the reach of our students," he warned.

Board member Norman Lewis, however, felt that the board should increase the price now, then decrease it later if the increase proves unnecessary. He made a motion to increase lunches to 40 cents.

The motion was defeated 4-3, with members Lewis, Warren Miller and Dr. Anthony Bolyn voting in favor of it and Theodore Sebring, James Price, Verdon Rustine and Joseph Kuchinski voting it down.

The board approved a recommendation from its building and grounds committee to award a bid contract for two lawn and garden tractors in the amount of $2,558 to Miller-Oliver, Inc.

The Miller-Oliver bid was not the low bid received, but came closest to meeting board specifications. Some board members felt the low bid was close enough for serving the needs of the district, however.

The board defeated 4-2 a motion to reject the committee's action and award the contract to the low bidder. Board members Rustine and Bolyn were the only ones to vote in favor of the motion. Sebring abstained.

a sense of satisfaction from "being the best cake-baker in town," something they can't do in the streets of Manhattan.

"I don't understand it," she laughed. "But it seems to be the thing to do."

The fair, rather than catering to the "honky tonk atmosphere" of many shows, according to Mrs. Van Lierde, is more of a showcase for what people can do.

Five $10 prizes will be awarded to the exhibitor who garners the most points in any one category — agricultural; flowers; handwork; sewing and food.

Points are meted out in each category for first, second and third places — five points, four points and three points for the respective places.

The multitude of 4-H and other youth exhibitors have expanded this year's fair to the first floor of the grange hall. 4-H Exhibitors are judged on a merit award basis.

Judging of all exhibits will take place at 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Exhibits will be accepted from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. today. No entry fee is charged; schedules are available at the Pike County Courthouse, Milford.

The public will be admitted to the fair Friday at 1 p.m. and all day Saturday. No admission fee is charged.

Shawnee area loses power

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — More than 100 Metropolitan Edison customers in the Mosier's Knob area of Shawnee were without power from 9:30 to 11:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Cause of the loss was not known, according to Tom Kostebek, district manager for Met-Ed.

West End park hit again

GILBERT — The chairman of the West End Park made a public appeal for assistance Wednesday in alleviating the vandalism problem which has plagued the park since it opened five years ago.

Russell Scheller asked for help following acts of vandalism at the Gilbert Park early Wednesday morning.

He said persons broke a window to gain access to the park's recreation building and then broke into two vending machines.

Scheller said the park has been the subject of perennial attacks during the summer months. He said the lights are continuously broken and other minor acts of vandalism occur often.

The park is patrolled part-time by the Monroe County Police Reserve. Two men are employed at one time receiving $3.50 an hour each.

"I think we are doing everything that's reasonable. It's a frustrating situation. I don't think the park commission and Monroe County can afford it. It's too big of a burden on the taxpayers," Scheller said.

The park chairman is hopeful the state police at Fern Ridge will be able to patrol the West End area.

Scheller said, "When we (the park commission) prepare our budget this fall, we'll have to decide whether we will budget more money for security."

He said the commission simply can't afford to maintain 24-hour security. In addition to the police reserves, a park maintenance man also does some security work in his off hours.

S-burg woman hurt in crash

STROUDSBURG — A Stroudsburg woman was treated at the General Hospital of Monroe County Wednesday for injuries suffered when she was struck by a car at Ninth and Main Streets.

Stroudsburg police said Laura Wolbert, 53, 51 N. 10th St., was struck by a car at 1:06 p.m., operated by Carolyn A. Nase, 19, Stroudsburg R.D. 1.

Charges are pending further investigation.

55th PGA championship could begin 'new era'

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The PGA beginning Thursday ends the major championships for the year but it also could mark the start of a new era in professional golf.

In the first three years of this decade, 8 of the 12 major titles belonged to Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Gary Player.

This year, that trio is 0-for-3 and people are talking mostly about Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller as leading contenders for the 55th PGA Championship.

"We used to have the Palmer-Nicklaus era," cracked Bert Yancey. "Now I think we may have the Nicklaus-Weiskopf era."

Weiskopf, the British Open champion, is still on his incredible hot streak — nine straight tournaments in the top five including five victories — and Miller, the U.S. Open champ, says he's "pumped up" to continue his record in the major events, which this year is the best of anyone.

They were 1-3 at Oakmont and 1-2 at Troon and the big question here is how much longer Jack Nicklaus will have to wait to win that elusive No. 14 — and break a tie with the late Bobby Jones for the most major championships.

Nicklaus finished strong but only for third and fourth places in the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open. In each he had one killing early round — 77, 74 and 76, respectively.

"It hasn't even been one bad round," Nicklaus says. "It's just that in each one of them, I've had one stretch of 3-4-5 bad holes. I don't know whether it's just a lack of concentration, or what." He has won only 4 of the last 25 major championships.

Player is the defending champion but he is still far off his game following a layoff for surgery last year. He says "I haven't played a reasonable tournament this year." And Trevino, who finally began practicing here Wednesday, has been in something of a slump for several months.

Billy Casper also thinks he has a chance for his first PGA title. He won his last start, the Western Open, more than a month ago and says "I usually play well coming off a rest."

Casper, whose Western victory ended a prolonged slump, said "I was never worried because I knew that I would win again."

"My winning helped ease the minds of a lot of people who thought I was finished," he said.

Then, of course, there's always Arnold Palmer, playing in his 16th PGA Championship and still trying to win the only major title that has eluded him. He has been second three times and also finished fifth, sixth and seventh. Canterbury is a course he knows well, having played it often in the mid-50s when he was stationed for three years in the Coast Guard in Cleveland.

And, adds Weiskopf:

"Major championships are so great because you make history."

This one is being played on a

Trevino picks PGA winner but won't rule self out

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Lee Trevino said Wednesday he was "still not mentally prepared" for the 55th annual PGA tournament which starts today.

Trevino, who skipped last week's Westchester Classic, made the comment after completing his only practice round on the 6,852-yard, par 71 Canterbury Golf Club course.

But he was quick to add, however, "I'm going to try to change that tomorrow. I've won a lot of golf tournaments when I didn't feel like playing. All it takes to get me going is to have one good round."

Trevino, who has won only twice this year and not since early March when he captured the Doral Open, said it had been "a long year" for him, but added, "I'll be back. Next year I'm going to play more golf and do less in my outside activities."

Trevino said he isn't surprised by his slump this year, pointing out that there are "so many good young players on the tour now that every tournament is up for grabs, although Tom Weiskopf doesn't seem to think so."

Trevino picked Weiskopf, who has won five of the last nine tournaments he has entered, as the "odds on favorite, along with Jack Nicklaus" to win the tournament.

Trevino based his thoughts on the fact that both Nicklaus and Weiskopf are long hitters and he feels that Canterbury is more suited to the long hitter, and also the fact Weiskopf,

Gas enough for bombers

By GAIL NEVINS

STROUDSBURG — No fuel shortage for the bomb droppers: It has been reported that 304.9 million gallons of fuel — enough to run 304,000 cars or to heat 250,000 American homes for a year — were consumed by American bombers based in Thailand and Guam in bombing missions over Cambodia between January and May of this year.

These figures, compiled by the Monroe County (N.Y.) Conservation Council, make it "impossible to believe that a gasoline shortage exists," says Wayne Harris, chairman of the council's air and water pollution committee.

"The redirection of this fuel to our country would terminate any shortage; and in fact, serve to reduce the price of gasoline to the consumer."

Another avenue open for reducing current fuel consumption involves this country's commercial airlines. It has become public that major U.S. airlines have been granted permission by the Civil Aeronautics board to discuss the possibility of reducing cruise speeds to conserve fuel.

According to a brief filed by United Air Lines, travel at mach 0.8 (eight-tenths the speed of sound) would consume 1,100 pounds less fuel between Chicago and Los Angeles than travel at mach .82; and the difference in arrival time would be only four minutes.

Something mysterious killing Virginia bees

BERRYVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Arlington Palmer hasn't had much luck since he moved to Berryville six months ago to become the largest, but most disaster-prone beekeeper in the area.

Less than three months after taking over the Old Virginia Honey Company, a then-prospering business, Palmer's bees started dying. The bee kill has continued and has wiped out a third of Palmer's colonies.

The mysterious death of Palmer's bees and those of a number of other beekeepers in the Northern Virginia area is puzzling state experts who say the situation is hopeless unless the cause of death is discovered soon.

About 80 per cent of Palmer's income comes from honey.

"I've just about lost the honey now ... it's too late to do anything," said Palmer, estimating his total loss to be near $25,000.

The death of the bees also will affect apple orchard owners who rent bees for pollination purposes in the spring of each year. Palmer said the loss of so many colonies is going to force the price of rental bees from $5.50 to $8 or $9.

"Even if the price doubles, it's not going to help me on my loss," he added.

Palmer scoffed at the suggestion of federal subsidies — "it's worth about two cents" — but said that if he doesn't get some sort of indemnity payments he will never make it.

The government pays beekeepers for loss of colonies due to pesticides.

Palmer is convinced that the trouble is caused by pesticide spray but the state Department of Agriculture is convinced it is not. H. P. Powers, state apiarist, has a theory that the ozone factor in the air is causing the deaths.

"I don't think pollution has any part of it," Palmer said. "As far as I'm concerned, it's got to be something in the combs that's killing bees whether they prove it in the lab or not."

Re: Automobile Advertising

This memo is addressed specifically to you as an automobile dealer. We put it in this newspaper — where just about everybody will see it — because we are virtually certain that you will be among those reading it and concentrating on the message.

If you've read this far, you know we're right, and that's part of what we want to say.

This newspaper reaches 80 per cent of all the households in our coverage area. Research by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. shows that 82 per cent of all readers open and look at the ad pages, and that those most interested in buying a car will be most likely to read the ads about cars.

The newspaper has another advantage for you. You "freeze" your message so the reader can take his time absorbing the facts. There is no 10-20-30 second limit on what you can say. Show your full line, make comparisons, really tell the story. It's okay — the message isn't going to fade in a few seconds.

Public Notices

NOTICE

The East Stroudsburg Zoning Hearing Board will conduct a public hearing, August 16, 1973, at 7:30 p.m., in the Municipal Building, 24 Anolomink Street, East Stroudsburg, Pa.

On the following:

Mr. C. L. Cramer, 125 Berwick Heights Road, East Stroudsburg, Pa., requests a seven (7) foot variance on a front setback, property is located in an R-1 zone.

Mr. Robert E. Miller, 622 Scott Street, Stroudsburg, Pa., requests a special use for group residence for persons at 280 Van Gordon Street, East Stroudsburg, Pa. Property is located in an R-2 zone.

Extra meeting to be held on August 23, at 7:00 P.M. Mr. Henry R. Worthington, Shawnee-on-Delaware requests a variance from Section 9.11 of the zoning ordinance for erection of a planned unit development. Property is located at the corner of Smith and Mary Streets, East Stroudsburg, Pa., in an R-1 zone.

By the order of East Stroudsburg Zoning Hearing Board
Frank Randall, Chairman

Notice to bidders

Sealed bids will be received by the Borough of Delaware Water Gap at the Municipal Building, Delaware Water Gap, Pa., not later than 8:00 P.M. (E.D.T.) Thursday, August 16, 1973, and publicly opened and read to

1. Approximately 246 tons of 10-2A surface course bituminous concrete and approximately 97 tons of 10-2A base course bituminous concrete conforming to Pennsylvania Department of Highways Specifications Section 420 Form 408. The bid must be paid per ton at the mixing plant. The location of the mixing plant shall be stated.

2. 685 L.F. 18" reinforced cement concrete pipe.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check in the amount of ten per cent (10%) of the total amount of bid made payable to the Borough of Delaware Water Gap. The bid will be retained to pay for any damage or loss to the Borough in case the successful bidder shall neglect or refuse to enter into a contract in accordance with the bid.

The successful bidder is required to furnish a performance bond in the amount of fifty per cent (50%) of the amount of the contract within ten days after the contract has been awarded and upon failure to execute a proper agreement or to furnish bond within such time the previous award shall void.

The Borough Council reserves the right to reject any or all bids. By order of the Borough Council
